Love, Stargirl
To The Teacher

This unit could be used as an independent novel unit for your students to complete on their own or in small groups. If you should choose to do this, a reading requirement chart is provided to allow you to set up a schedule for the reading of the novel.

The student has tasks to complete after each section is read. Each task begins with comprehension questions. These questions may be answered while reading or after reading each section of the novel. You may even decide to use them as a quiz or homework. The comprehension questions are followed with standards-based activities.

7. What does Stargirl have to write after she goes on a field trip? _____
8. How does she find out where she will be going on her field trips? _____

Irony

- Verbal irony involves a contrast between what is said or written and what is meant. Example: if you call a really tall person, "Shorty"
- Situational irony occurs when what happens is very different from what is expected to happen. Example: A man who has been afraid to fly in a plane all of his life finally gets the courage to do it, and then the plane crashes.
- Dramatic irony occurs when the audience or the reader knows something a character does not know. Example: The reader knows who the criminal is, but the characters do not know.

...I climbed onto a picnic table and got into my meditation position. (OK, back up. . . I'm homeschooling again. Gee, I wonder why – my Mica High School experience went so well!)

After reading the definitions for the three types of irony, what type of irony is used in this passage?

_____ Explain your answer. _____

Stargirl's Poem

Reread the poem Stargirl wrote about her trip to the stone piles. Then answer each of the following questions.

1. What type of poem is this? (Check all that apply.)
a. _____ lyrical c. _____ narrative
b. _____ free verse d. _____ haiku
2. Find an example of alliteration in the poem and write it here. _____
3. Does the poem employ imagery? _____ If yes. Provide an example. _____

4. What is a refrain? _____
5. Does Stargirl's poem have a refrain? _____ If yes, write it here. _____

Love, Stargirl

January 16 – February 14

Name: _____ Date: _____

Comprehension

1. What is the condition of Stargirl's wagon and its pebbles? _____
2. Who does Stargirl see that wears a brilliant red and yellow plaid scarf? _____
3. Where does she see that person? _____
4. What surprises Stargirl about Grace? _____

6. Who is Betty Lou? _____
7. What does she suffer from? _____
8. What can Dootsie do with her eye that is creepy? _____
9. What happens to Cinnamon in the snow? _____

Realistic Dialogue

In order to create characters that seem real, writers must sometimes stray away from Standard English when writing dialogue. The character, Dootsie, is a very young girl who does not speak "the correct way" all of the time. This makes her "sound" like a little kid.

On page 14, Dootsie says the following:

"No! I'm here! I'm here! I'm just imizable!" She came running. "Cimmamum!"

Underline the words that Dootsie uses that are not spoken correctly.

Find other examples of Dootsie's dialogue that do not use correct pronunciation. Use the following chart to help you find these examples.

Page #	Dialogue

Discussion

How does Dootsie's dialogue add to the development of her character?

Text Interpretation

Reread the way Stargirl describes Dootsie's room (page 14-15). On a separate sheet of paper, draw what you think Dootsie's room looks like based on Stargirl's words. Make sure you use lots of color!

Fluency Practice

With a partner, read the conversation between Stargirl and Dootsie found on pages 15 through 16.

February 18 – March 6

Name: _____ Date: _____

Comprehension

1. What anniversary is on February 18? _____
2. What is Margie's? _____
3. Who is Alvina? _____
4. Who bothers Alvina? _____
5. What is the topic of Stargirl's poem from her field trip to Maggie's? _____
6. Who does Stargirl miss most from Arizona? _____

Extended Metaphor

An extended metaphor is a metaphor (a comparison where one thing is called another) that continues into the sentences that follow. On page twenty-nine, there is an extended metaphor. Reread the following passage:

*...Is there anything uglier or sadder than a ten-day old snow dump? It's not even snow anymore. It's slush.
Was that beginning to be us, Leo? I'd rather never see you again than have that happen. We were once so fresh, a dazzling snowfield. Let's promise to each other that if we ever meet again we will never plow and push our new-fallen snow. We will not become slush. We will stay like this field and melt away together only in the sun's good time.

The metaphor begins with We were once so fresh, a dazzling snowfield. She is talking about her relationship with Leo, of course. Then, the author extends this metaphor by weaving in the bolded words that go along with snow. An extended metaphor does not just exist in prose (paragraphs). They are often found in poetry as well. The lines from the passage could be made to look like a poem.

We were once so fresh, a dazzling snowfield.
Let's promise to each other
that if we ever meet again we will never plow and push
our new-fallen snow.
We will not become slush.
We will stay like this field
and melt away together
only in the sun's good time.

You try it!

It is easy to create an extended metaphor. Let's try one as a poem.

Start with this metaphor: Life is a snowflake.

Now, write a list of things, sights, sounds, experiences that come to mind when you think of a snowflake.

Finally, write your poem. Let your first line be Life is a snowflake. Then, weave in the words that you listed throughout your poem.

Life is a snowflake

Sample Extended Metaphor Poem

Step one: Make a list of words that you associate with a snowflake.

Life is a snowflake

Cold
Beautiful
Unique
Unexpected
Fun
Delicate Peaceful
Blizzard
Dusting

Step 2: Write the poem. Begin with the metaphor, and weave in the words you have listed.

Life

Life is a snowflake.
It has its share of unexpected events but it is also delicate and beautiful!
If you will just keep your eye on what's important and keep warm during the cold times,
those blizzards won't keep you down.
And the uniqueness
is all that really counts
in each season
of life.

Writing Opportunity - Friendly Letter

In this section, Stargirl writes a letter to herself. In her letter to herself, she gives herself advice in getting over her sadness of losing her boyfriend.

On a separate sheet of paper, write a friendly letter to yourself. Give yourself advice on dealing with a problem in your life, or tell yourself what your hopes are for your future.

Make sure you follow the correct friendly letter format.

Fluency Practice

With a partner, read the conversation between Stargirl and her dad found on page 39.

Haiku

Stargirl says that she writes three haiku. Haiku is a form of poetry from the Japanese culture. The poems follow simple rules. They are:

- Use exactly 17 syllables
- Be made of three lines (5 syllables- 7 syllables- 5 syllables)
- Avoid using big words
- Traditionally, a haiku refers to nature, feelings, and/or experiences.
- Use no rhyme

Flowers start to bloom.
Bright, tall, thin and proud they stand.
Spring becomes summer.

You try it!

Step 1: Complete this haiku by filling in line two (the seven syllable line).

Figurative Language

Writers use figurative language to make their writing more interesting and effective. By using a simile, metaphor, or personification, the writer is able to paint a picture in the mind of the reader.

Simile – a comparison of two things using the words like, as, or than

Metaphor – calls one thing another

Personification- gives a nonhuman object human traits

Hyperbole – an extreme exaggeration

Idiom – a commonly used expression that means something totally different than what it says

Complete the following chart to examine the figurative language used in the first portion of the book.

Page #	Passage	Type of figurative language	What it means
9	. . .if he were a Snow White dwarf, he would be Droopy. .
29	I saw the first flower of the year today. A crocus, peeking out from under a bush . . .
33	. . . look at you, sniveling like a baby over some immature kid in Arizona. . .
56	. . . If you start by hating one or two people, you won't be able to stop. Pretty soon you'll hate a hundred people...even a zillion.
56	. . .hatred ...it grows and grows. . .it's hungry.
63	His skin looked as if it had been toasted in the Arizona desert.

Imagery

Throughout this section and the entire novel, Jerry Spinelli uses imagery to help the readers feel like they are there. He describes the characters so that the reader has a complete picture of what the person is like. He describes the setting so that the reader has a complete picture of what the places are like. Read the following passage and underline the words that allow you to “see” the settings and people.

1. . . . I saw a little girl in a wooden wagon, her dress spilling colors over its sides, staring at the rising sun as if it were the very dawn of creation. . . I could see the growing glint of the rising sun doubled in her eyes.

I resumed my seat on the wagon behind her. Halfway born, the sun lost its edge and its orange and flooded the east with blinding yellow...

2. . . . The house is beautiful, gray stone with a wraparound porch and yellow awnings, on a street shaded sycamores.

I went right to the back, which is part brick patio, part grass, and the most beautiful garden I've worked so far. The flowers alone would have been enough, but there was more – elegant grasses taller than me, little stone sculptures) a child reading, a garden angel), a white birch and a pair of holly trees, a flagstone path winding through it all.

3. Another scorcher. It's too hot here! And dry. We've had nine days over 90 degrees in July and hardly any rain.

Grass looks like straw. Not even weeds are growing. My Garden Groomer business is hurting.

What type of figurative language is used in the bolded sentence in the third passage? _____

8. Thomas Klecko – Alvina’s younger brother
9. He is the man in the green watch hat that walks around at the stone piles at the old cement plant

Imagery

1. . . . I saw a little girl in a wooden wagon, her dress spilling colors over its sides, staring at the rising sun as if it were the very dawn of creation. . . . I could see the growing glint of the rising sun doubled in her eyes.

I resumed my seat on the wagon behind her. Halfway born, the sun lost its edge and its orange and flooded the east with blinding yellow...

2. . . . The house is beautiful, gray stone with a wraparound porch and yellow awnings, on a street shaded sycamores.

I went right to the back, which is part brick patio, part grass, and the most beautiful garden I’ve worked so far. The flowers alone would have been enough, but there was more – elegant grasses taller than me, little stone sculptures (a child reading, a garden angel), a white birch and a pair of holly trees, a flagstone path winding through it all.

3. Another scorcher. It’s too hot here! And dry. We’ve had nine days over 90 degrees in July and hardly any rain.

Grass looks like straw. Not even weeds are growing. My Garden Groomer business is hurting.

Allusion

An allusion is a reference to a person, a historical event, or a fictional character or story. Writers usually expect the readers to recognize an allusion.

There is an allusion on page 111. Record the sentence the allusion is in on the lines below.

Babel is a reference to the Bible. The Tower of Babel (Genesis 11:1-11) was a tower built by Noah's descendants (probably in Babylon) who intended it to reach up to heaven. However, God disrupted the work of building the tower by confusing the language of the workers so that they could no longer understand one another. The tower was never completed.

Why is this allusion effective as Stargirl looks at the roof of Ike's Bike & Mower Repair where Perry is sleeping?

What two types of figurative language are found in the sentence you copied from page 111? (Be sure to include the words that form each example of figurative language.)

_____ and _____

Oxymoron

An oxymoron is a figure of speech that combines two apparently contradictory terms.

Examples: icy hot, living dead, pretty ugly, jumbo shrimp, plastic glasses

Which of the following sentences contains an oxymoron?

- a. The grass gave a standing ovation.
- b. Lightening flashed white in the kitchen.
- c. Such a wonderful scent. Like vanilla.
- d. It used to be the sweet center of my life. Now it's bittersweet.

To The Teacher:

Readers' Theater

Students build fluency through reading out loud, and at the middle school level, what better way to allow this than with readers' theater? The August 3rd portion of Stargirl is perfect for this activity because the parts are basically already written out on pages 111 through 124.

If you want to get your students' attention, read the beginning of this section with a monotone voice until they stop you and ask you why you are doing this. Tell them that when reading aloud, you should always read with expression. Next, read the section with expression, changing your voice to match each character.

This readers' theater will be for four people – two narrators, Stargirl, and Perry. So, you will need to place your students into groups of four. The script has been started. Have them work together to complete the script. (If the number of students in your class requires you to have a group of five, simply divide the narrator role into three parts.)

Most students greatly enjoy readers' theater. The key is making sure they feel comfortable with the part that they will be reading. If you have struggling readers, you may want to give them the script the day before the reading and let them practice reading it at home. Have fun!

Love, Stargirl
Readers' Theater – August 3

Name: _____ Role: _____

Narrator 1: Stargirl awoke in a sweat despite the whirring floor fan at the foot of her bed. She had been dreaming, but already the dream had fled. She got dressed and tiptoed downstairs. She rode through the night and the high moon, down the middle of empty streets, under the Blob banner, to the canal. She crossed the bridge and coasted to a stop in the dust in front of Ike's Bike & Mower Repair. A car was parked out front. She laid the bike down carefully and stood there, listening to the insects. She walked around back. When she saw the ladder she gasped. The roof was only one story high, but it seemed to scrape the moon and felt as forbidding as Babel. She took a deep breath and started climbing.

Narrator 2: Perry was in the middle of the roof, spread-eagle on a blanket, bare-skinned except for the ragged cutoffs he had worn at the pool, sheeted in the moonlight. Stargirl thought of Leo and how he had kept the shade of his bedroom window up so the moonlight could fall on him. Stargirl sat on the edge of the raised edge of the roof, watching, listening to Perry's breathing. She thought she could have been comfortable staying like that all night – watching, silent – but he was a person, not a backyard flower. At last she called from the edge.

Stargirl: Hi, Perry.

Narrator 1: Perry did not move.

Stargirl: (louder) Hi, Perry.

Narrator 2: Perry's eyes opened to the sky above. Then they began to move, through the rest of him did not. They finally landed on Stargirl.

Perry: (croaky) Who's that?

Narrator 1: The moon was now behind Stargirl. Her face was in shadow. His simple question stumped her. As far as she knew, he didn't even know her name. How should she identify herself? She thought over several possibilities.

Stargirl: I'm the girl you spat at.

Narrator 2: Perry laughed, or at least something that resembled laughter came out of his mouth. His head flopped back down. His eyes closed. Stargirl was afraid that was all.

Perry: What do you want?

Stargirl: Dootsie said you sleep on your roof on hot nights.

Perry: Didn't answer the question.

Narrator 1: He was right. His voice was straining, its tone saying leave me alone so I can go back to sleep.

Stargirl: I guess I don't know what I want. I woke up. It was hot. I couldn't sleep. I remembered what Dootsie said. And here I am.

Perry: You don't have your own roof?

Stargirl: Well, sure, but it's not flat like this one. Besides, you're not on my roof. You're on this one.

Perry: You want to sleep here?

Stargirl: No, no, I don't mean that.

Perry: What do you mean?

Narrator 2: Stargirl was very uncomfortable. Whatever had compelled her to come here was gone.

Stargirl: I don't know. I do things without thinking. (standing) I'll go. I am sorry I woke you up.

*Now, using notebook paper, work with your group to complete the script for the August 3rd letter.

Strong Verbs

Verbs are words that describe the action in a sentence. Some verbs are said to be stronger than others, and these are the ones that tend to make your writing more effective. Here's how it works: take a verb like fall and another verb with a similar meaning like plunge. Now, compare these two sentences: (1) I watched the rock fall into the water. (2) I watched the rock plunge into the water. In the first sentence, you learn that the rock fell, but in the second sentence you also learn how the rock fell. The word plunge means "to enter quickly and forcibly into something". So, when I say plunge, I get all the meaning of the verb fall, plus the additional meaning that explains how the rock fell as well. That is what makes it stronger! Strong verbs SHOW, not just TELL!

Reread the letters about the Blob activities (August 23 and 24). Then complete the chart by listing the strong verbs you find. Underline the strong verbs. Please also include the noun performing the action as well as any significant adjectives/adverbs. The chart has been started for you.

The Blob crawled.

We were swept through the doors.

Poetry Elements

Stargirl's letters to Leo include many poems – some are written on purpose – others are written by accident. For example, reread the beginning of her August 25 letter. The first paragraph sounds like a poem! Look at it here rewritten to look like a poem.

The mockingbird does not dump me.
The mockingbird has no harem.
The mockingbird takes nothing,
Demands nothing.
The mockingbird does nothing
But give –
Give its song.

Here, Stargirl is really depending on the mockingbird to make herself feel better. She reveals to us that even with her troubles with Leo and Perry, she can find happiness in something as simple and common as a mockingbird. Think about your own world. What is something simple that gives you comfort when you feel down? _____

On a separate sheet of paper, or in your journal, write a poem about this simple thing that brings you joy.

On August 29th, Stargirl writes a poem about her trip to the clock on the Morning Lenape building. Carefully reread the poem. Then, answer the following questions.

1. What is the theme of the poem? _____
2. Alliteration is a device that consists of repeating the same consonant sound at the beginning of two or more words that are close to one another. Find an example of alliteration in her poem and record it here.

3. Why does Stargirl most likely include questions in her poem? _____

Non-Fiction Passage Analysis

Stargirl tells Alvina to “count coup”. Read the following article about “counting coup”. Then, answer the questions below it.

Among Native North Americans of the Plains culture, during battle, an honor was awarded for striking an enemy in specific ways. These strikes, coups as they were called, were considered an extreme act of bravery. Generally, coups were awarded according to the degree of difficulty and danger involved. Any blow struck against the enemy counted as a coup, but the most prestigious acts included touching an enemy warrior, with the hand or with a coup stick, then escaping unharmed. Counting coup could also involve stealing from the enemy. Risk of injury or death was required to count coup. Coups were recorded by notches in a coup stick or by feathers in the headdress of a warrior. Headdresses were not as common as Hollywood has made them out to be; they were burdensome in battle, so they were primarily used in ceremonies. Native Americans who were rewarded with notches or feathers were known for bravery by their peers.

Counting coup was an important social function in Native American culture. The most extreme example of counting coup in Indian wars would be when a warrior would hit his enemy with a stick. This would change the enemy's energy, by just letting him know that you are not frightened and if you had really wanted to hurt him you could have. This act of physically touching your enemy without seriously hurting him could take away the enemy's anger. It created an opportunity for the enemy to think about and consider what he was doing and gave him a chance to “cool down”.

1. What genre is this passage? _____
2. What is the main idea of the first paragraph?
 - a. Feathers were given as a reward for counting coup.
 - b. Counting coup was an act of extreme bravery in Native American culture.
 - c. Touching an enemy with a coup stick is counting coup.
 - d. There was a risk of danger or death when counting coup.
3. Which of the following sentences is not related to the main idea of the first paragraph?
 - a. Counting coup could also involve stealing from the enemy.
 - b. Coups were recorded by notches in a coup stick or by feathers in the headdress of a warrior.
 - c. Headdresses were not as common as Hollywood has made them out to be; they were burdensome in battle, so they were primarily used in ceremonies.
 - d. Native Americans who were rewarded with notches or feathers were known for bravery by their peers.
4. Which of the following transition words would best enhance meaning if it were added to the last sentence in paragraph two?
 - a. However,
 - b. In addition,
 - c. Since,
 - d. Certainly,
5. Which of the following words could best be used in place of the underlined words in paragraph two?
 - a. disarm
 - b. remove

Silent Passage Analysis

Teacher Directions: Write each of these passages in the center of a separate sheet of paper or on the center of a sheet of chart paper. Then, have students (one at a time) silently read each passage and make a comment about them individually. (You could either pass around a sheet of paper or have students move around the room if you decide to use chart paper.) The comment may be their interpretation of the passage or what the passage means to them personally. Some students may comment on another student's comment. You may find other passages in the book you would like to add to this activity.

. . . maybe you're merely uncomfortable with uncertainty. Like the rest of the human race.

Live today. Not yesterday. Not tomorrow. Just today. Inhabit your moments. Don't rent them out to tomorrow.

... I think I've been pretty much a flop. . .

Welcome to Floptown! We're all flops. None of us get it right all of the time.

You're cheating yourself out of today. Today is calling to you, trying to get your attention, but you're stuck on tomorrow, and today trickles away like water down a drain. You wake up the next morning and that today you wasted is gone forever. It's now yesterday. Some of those moments may have had wonderful things in store for you, but now you'll never know.

Writing Opportunity – Create a Comic Strip

Create a comic strip for the November 1 letter. Use this sheet to help you plan it. Your final draft will be done on white paper provided by your teacher. Draw pictures of the main events described in this letter, and use captions to help describe the action. Think of scenes and actions that occur, the characters that are present, the landscape/setting and props, and make sure you pay attention to Jerry Spinelli's imagery as you draw each scene. You may not need all of the boxes on these pages. Your comic strip will be scored using the rubric at the bottom.

Comic Strip Rubric

Criteria	Possible Points	Points Earned
Scene selection: Includes all of the most important events from the letter	15
Captions: Captions are clearly related to both the scenes drawn and to the important events from the chapter. The captions are well written with few spelling, punctuation or grammar errors.	35
Characters: Main characters from the chapter are included and their actions and dialogue in the comic strip match those from the letter.	25
Background illustrations: The illustrations are directly related to the imaginary provided by the author and help the reader understand the scene.	25

Symbolism

A symbol is something that stands for something else, like our flag stands for our country. It is any object, person, place, or experience that means more than what it is.

A literary symbol has literal meaning in a story but stands for something else.

Remember, if something is symbolic, it will most likely

- be repeated in the book
- be written in a memorable or vivid way
- be emphasized with imagery
- mean something else than what it is

Theme

Theme is the stories central message; a life lesson

Some things to remember about theme are:

- Theme is what the author wants you to remember most.
- Occasionally the theme is stated directly in the novel/passage.
- Most often, the theme is unstated and is revealed to the reader gradually throughout the novel/passage.
- Theme is written as a statement, not just a word.
- Different readers can have completely different theme statements. This is fine as long as each reader can support his/her idea with evidence from the novel/passage.

Plan for understanding theme in Love, Stargirl:

Step 1: List words from the novel that express the big ideas or topics from the novel.

Step 2: Think about what the characters in the novel do and say that relate to the topics you listed above.

Step 3: Come up with a statement of the author’s point or message based on one or more of your big ideas. Remember, you should be able to support your statement with things the characters do and say.

Step 4: List evidence from the novel to support your theme statement. (This should be things the characters did and said.)

Symbolism

Reread the August 8th (pages 124-125) and November 24th (pages 234-235) letters.

Which of the following does the mockingbird symbolize in general?

c. happiness

Explain this answer: The mockingbird makes Stargirl happy to hear it on that first morning, August 8th. When she tells Betty Lou about the mockingbird, Betty Lou wishes for a mockingbird outside of her window. Stargirl then uses orange halves to get a mockingbird to come to Betty Lou's yard. She wants Betty Lou to be as happy as possible.
